RE: In the Matter of applications of AT&T Inc. and Deutsche Telekom AG for consent to assign or Transfer Control of licenses and Authorizations; (WT Proceeding - No. 11-65).

Dear Commissioners:

We truly live in a global world. If you turn on the television or look on the computer, one can view news, products, and advertisements from a global perspective. Since the physical environment divides our world we rely completely on technology to bridge the divides of the ocean and mountains. It amazes me every day that I can turn on my computer and look face to face with a friend or colleague that is thousands of miles away.

At the Asian American Business Development Center we see technology as a necessity, particularly in the marketplace. Although we focus on establishing business opportunities between China and New York, the technological tools we use aren't region specific. High-speed internet and wireless access is a necessity all over the world to do business.

I cannot even imagine trying to effectively and efficiently promote business between China and America by having to write letters or return to my office to use a certain type of phone for international calls. Thankfully, technology has advanced to a place where international communication can be fast and easy. But, technology had to be created to support these inventions. In years past we have had enough of this technology to support us. Times are changing and soon we will run out of enough 'spectrum' to support us. Supporting the merger between AT&T and T-Mobile would be a preemptive step towards solving this problem, because their combined spectrum bandwidth would afford network users the ability to use their mobile devices to the fullest potential without the fear of overwhelming the available spectrum.

China has become a major business partner and economic ally for the United States. We need to do what we can to insure that communication between the two countries remains open and the prosperous business ventures are allowed to continue. I urge you to review this merger with great care and ultimately find, as I have, that this merger is needed in America.

Sincerely,
